Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c and $1.00 per bottle by R. H. Holliday. Druggist, Clinton; and JOHN R. SMITH, Druggist, Mount Olive.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found hers if benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at DR. R. H. HOLLIDAY'S Drugstore, Clinton, N. C., and JOHN R. SMITH, Mount Olive; large bottles 50 cents and one dollar.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

HOW THINGS LOOK FROM OUR STAND POINT.

The Opinion of The Editor and the Opinion of Others which we Can Endorse on the Various Topics of the Day.

North Carolina is not barren of talents in any branch of learning. Its poorest success is in the field of letters—in polite literature.—Dr. T. B. Kingsbury.

The Speaker did not get the usual vote of thanks which the House tenders the Speaker at the close of each session, because no Democrat would move for its adoption. They did not feel that they owed Mr. Reed any thanks.

Rev. R. E. Peele, of Wilmington, sizes up the Rev. Sam Jones in the following terms:

"Sam Jones is a religious cyclone, the only one in existence, and the one needed and never needed until now. He is a second flood to the moral rottenness of the nineteenth century, and there will never be another of the sort. He is not vulgar or unrefined but simply talks what the people DO; neither irreverent nor profane, he only exposes both. He abuses nobody's person, but everybody's meanness, and if a fellow is all meanness it is not Jones' fault that the picture is so bad."

The Democratic doctrine of tariff reform is daily gaining ground and the Radicals are growing uneasy. Even the Presidential head that is swallowed up in its grandfather's hat is uneasy about the next election, and an effort, of which members of his cabinet are prime movers, is being made to colonize several thousand North Carolina negroes in the doubtful States of West Virginia, Connecticut and Indiana in order to make them safely Republican. Portable voting machines are the only hope of Republicanism in these States, it seems, and the party must be in a sorry plight when foreign help must be summoned to hold these forts.

Senator Vorhees said of the session of Congress just closed: "It has been the worst of the many sessions I have been connected with, and its legislation, where it accomplished results, most injurious to the laboring interests of the country." Senator Gray said, on the same subject: "This session has been run by revolutionary methods, and as such will be notorious in history. The majority seem to have regarded it as necessary to impose the most burdensome taxes on the people. Partizan and class legislation has been the session's distinguishing characteristics. The taking up of the Force bill in December would be a logical conclusion to the legislation of this session. That bill is nothing but an extraordinary measure to perpetuate the power of the Republican party."

The New York Herald says:

"If a Democratic Congress is chosen this autumn it will confront, when it meets in December, 1891, a Treasury nearly depleted, as the result of Republican extravagance. The total appropriations for the fiscal year, which began July 1, are $361,311,503, exclusive of the permanent annual appropriations for the sinking fund, interest on the public debt and other small items. The only things which can save the Treasury from bankruptcy are the appropriation to Government uses of the $55,000,000 deposited with the Treasury in trust as security for the redemption of the national bank notes and the hope that all of the money appropriated at the session just passed will not be spent within the year. Nearly all the appropriations show an enormous advance over those for the year which has just closed.

Radicalism will bankrupt the country if not rebuked, and at the next election is the time to administer the rebuke.

The McKinley Tariff bill is so flagrantly wicked and unjust that even the departed murmur against it. From the political sepulchre of Ex-President Hayes a voice is heard exclaiming:

"I cannot find words to express my regret at the passage of the measure. It is ruinous to all our best interests, and it will do an infinite amount of harm. I cannot understand how public men can be so blind to the interests of the country at large as to pass such a bill. It is annihilating to the Republican party. It is the most terrible blow that has been struck at the party during its existence. I can only say that I hope such a policy will die out, surely and soon; but I cannot shut my eyes to the evil that will be done before such protection as this finds a grave."

Mr. Hayes, being retired to private live and the hope of office and Protectionist shekels being far removed from him, speaks out his conscientious opinion in this matter. The McKinley bill will go down in the history of our country as a national outrage upon the laboring classes, and the Republican party will be held to strict accountability for its evil results.

POLK AND LIVINGSTON

Speak to a Large Crowd of Yeomanry at Goldsboro.

[Editorial Correspondence.]

On last Thursday Col. L. L. Polk, President of the National Alliance and Col. L. F. Livingston, the National Lecturer, spoke to a large crowd at Goldsboro. Col. Livingston, who has served several terms in Congress, is again the Democratic nominee in the Atlanta District. We had the pleasure of hearing him and it was a capital speech. He made a strong plea for harmony and party success. He said that every thing must be fought out inside of party lines, that Alliance men should contend for their principles at the primaries and the conventions, but if defeated, to stand like men by the result, and go to work to establish the right through the next primaries and the next convention and election. We clip the following from the Argus, which is a part of brother Robinson's report of the speech:

And such a speech as was his has not been heard in these parts ever before or since Harry Tracy's great talk to the Alliance here last year. It was just such a speech as the farmers of this section needed. It dealt in such subjects as they stood in most need of information upon. It was comprehensive, taking in the tariff, the revenue, direct and indirect taxation, the national banking system, corporations, speculators, monopolies and trusts; and on all of these he gave forth in the expression of his views the soundest of Democratic doctrine. And he was well calculated to do this, as he stated that he is a Democrat, first last and all the time; and right along in the midst of these expressions, he addressed himself to the Sub-Treasury bill, and proclaimed that it was Democratic and constitutional, and dared any man, anywhere, to meet him in debate and prove to the contrary. As to the secrets of the Alliance he said that every organization, every family, every individual, every jury room, have secrets—"don't, then, if you are a just and honest man, talk about and censure our Order for having its secrets, and it planted them so deep in the farmers' hearts, and covered them up in sub-Alliances all over the country, that the powerful enemies of the principles of the Alliance could not find the seed until now they have taken root and cannot be uprooted by the allied power of all their enemies." He said "the Alliance is no mean, hide-bound organization," that its principles and its purposes are opposed to no man, order, association or interest that is right, that it has not fought except when it has been fought; that it's purpose is simply to make complaint inside its party ranks; that it is opposed to fighting outside of party lines. He counseled all differences to be put forward at the primaries and county conventions, but after that, to stop talking and go to work for party success. He said there was too much talking, —too much on both sides: "Carry your mouth along with you but don't talk!" "Be peace makers not peace-breakers. 'Blessed are the peace-makers' is a God-given sentiment of the Alliance, no matter what its enemies and detractors may say." He spoke fairly, calmly, forcibly and won many over who had been adverse to his views on this bill. There was nothing of the brag or bluster in Col. Livingston's manner. He impressed you at the start and held you in sympathy to the end by his earnestness and entire fairness.

Col. Polk, at the close of Col. Livingston's speech was called out. He made an eloquent talk, urging the Alliance to stick and stand true to the principles of the Order. He said that we should not be discouraged if the relief—the justice we were demanding did not come at once, but should work with still greater determination. That we had the wrong doings of a quarter of a century to right, and that it was a fight not of a month or a year, but of a life-time. At the close he gave at outline of the progress of the principles of the Order and how much had already been achieved in so short a time. The Col. will leave for Kansas this week, where we will make a dozen speeches.

HON. B. F. GRADY.

A correspondent of The Wilmington Messenger says: That brainy Democratic candidate for Congress in the Third Congressional district, B. F. Grady, Esq., spoke to an appreciative audience on Monday last at Burgaw. He had previously spoken at several places in Pender, and wins golden opinions wherever he speaks, as an able expounder of constitutional law, and of the history and principles of our National Government. His expositions of the enormities of the tariff, and of the McKinley Tariff bill, and of the oppressions of our national banking system, and of other ruinous laws of the Republican party, were clear, able and conclusive. No young member of the House of Representatives from North Carolina, ever took a higher stand in Congress, than this able and thoroughly informed Democrat will take. He is well posted on the science of political economy. Mr. Grady has devoted his useful life to farming and to teaching in schools and colleges. He is another striking example that talent, capacity, and patriotism, are as indigenous to country life as to towns and cities. He is making a vigorous and successful canvass of the district. The people are pleased with him wherever he goes.

HIS FLEETING IDEAL.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER 1.—By W. H. Ballou.—Henry Hershall, a young artist, while traveling in a parlor car, mentally sketches the personnel of his ideal wife. To his astonishment he sees his ideal reflected in the mirror, she being one of a party of four, consisting of an old man, presumably her father, a governess and a man with a villainous countenance. He makes a sketch of the party. During the night the girl plays entrancingly on her violin. He determines to make her acquaintance, but upon arising in the morning he finds that the train has been in the Grand Central depot some hours, and that the party of four has disappeared.

CHAPTER 2.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox—Mr. Crawford, his daughter Edna, Miss Brown, a governess, and Dr. Watson occupy a flat on West Thirty-eighth street. Their names are all assumed to hide some secret. Edna tells her father that she hates Dr. Watson and objects to his presence in the house, but Mr. Crawford insists that the doctor's presence is necessary to him. Watson possesses hypnotic influence over Edna and is leagued with Miss Brown in a secret compact. As predicted by him, Edna plays on her violin at night. A month later Henshall recognizes Watson at a hypnotic exhibition. By means of the sketch made in the car a detective locates the doctor at the Thirty-eighth street flat, but upon calling finds the party has moved. The same day a strange woman call at the flat seeking a Dr. Henshaw, and leaves muttering threats against Dr. Watson or Henshaw.

CHAPTER 3.—By Maj. Alfred C. Calhoun—Tom Wogly, a detective, calls at Henshall's studio and says that he saw Dr. Watson talking to a woman on Union square. He shadowed the woman to a boarding house on Second Avenue. Henshall's father calls and tells the young artist that he is in the power of Banker Hartman, who can ruin him. He implores his son to marry the Banker's daughter and thus save him. Meanwhile the Crawfords have moved further up town. Edna's hatred of Watson increases, and finally packing up her violin and some effects she leaves the house. While writing an advertisement in The World office a man asks her to read his advertisement to see if it is spelled correctly. The advertisement is for a female violinist.

IV—ONE PURPOSE AND TWO ENDS.

Lena Hartman, the banker's daughter, was one of those matter of fact maidens who seem to have been created as a useful foil to the sentimental gushfulness of the romantic damsel.

Miss Hartman was more than delicately plump. Her appearance suggested an intense regard for meals. Like the German fraulein, who is not at all disinclined to talk love over a steaming dish of Frankfurter sausages, supplemented by sauerkraut, Miss Hartman was eminently healthy.

As for her amiability, it was simply without limit. Miss Hartman was impervious to the petty worries of life. One of her friends always declared that nothing less than an earthquake would ever cause her the least agitation.

Henry Henshall called upon this portly maiden in due time, and her appearance filled him with a vague affright.

His artistic instincts told him at once that he need never expect from her either sympathy or even interest in his plans and his aspirations.

But his promise to his father dwelt in his mind sacredly intact. He would be a martyr and he must feel some consolation in that. Most men do.

It is well to reflect that one is a martyr, even though too late to be included in Fox's book.

The face of his unknown ideal blotted from his mind the large, immobile features of Miss Hartman the instant he left her, and he felt that as a reward for his sacrifice he could at least indulge in the luxury of thinking of this strangely met, strangely lost woman.

Lena Hartman was motherless, and had recently engaged as companion a woman whom Henshall regarded with undefined mistrust. She was a light haired, blue eyed woman, who years ago must have been extremely handsome, but her features were now livid with care. Her movements were furtive and catlike, and she seemed to regard the life she was living as unreal.

"What induced you to engage her, Lena?" asked Henshall one day, with the privilege of a newly made fiancee. He had glided into this position in such an unutterably commonplace manner that the chains so easily forged were hardly galling.

"Because she interests me," declared Miss Hartman. "I feel that she has a history. You always tell me, Harry, that I am the most unromantic being on earth. I know it. I can, however, appreciate romance in others, though I am aware that you think even that impossible."

Mr. Henshall sighed. He wondered stupidly if Lena would feel interested in his own brief, pointless romance.

He dimly saw the jealous demon rapping for admittance at the smooth doors of Miss Hartman's placidity. He saw the baffled retreat of this demon. He declined to admit even the possibility of Miss Hartman's jealousy.

His acquaintance with women was very slight. He imagined that the passionless affection evinced for him by his prudish wife was one of those airy trifles, the presence or absence of which was but of slight significance to the welfare of the woman.

One morning Mr. Henshall called at Mr. Hartman's house, more with the object of "reporting for duty," as he styled it in mental irony, than with any well defined object in view.

Mr. and Miss Hartman were out, he was informed. Mrs. Smith, the chaperon, was at present the only member of the family now at home. She was in the drawing room, ventured the domestic, discreetly.

Henshall never knew afterward what it was that prompted him to enter instead of leaving the conventional card to indicate his unsatisfied visit.

He told the servant he would stay for a time and wait the arrival of the father and daughter. Then leaving his hat and cane in the hall he walked to the door of the drawing room, and with a slight, premonitory knock entered.

The room was unlighted save by a full, red shaded lamp that cast a pink effulgence on objects in its immediate neighborhood.

The young man saw seated on a low chair close to the lamp the apathetic form of Mrs. Smith, the chaperon. She had not heard his knock and remained seated, her hands folded listlessly in front of her, her head bent slightly forward, until the sound of his light footfall reached her ear. Then with a start she rose and placed her hand upon the region of her heart.

"You alarmed me, Mr. Henshall," she declared, with an attempt at a smile that was a signal failure. "I did not expect anybody, because Mr. Hartman and Lena have gone out. Let me see," hesitatingly. "I think they went to a reception at Mrs. Van Anken's house on the avenue. Did—you—wish"——

"Nothing," interrupted the young man with a reassuring smile. "I thought I would come in for a few minutes and rest myself."

The absence of Miss Hartman was by no means regrettable. In fact Mr. Henshall felt a distinct relief at the respite from bald platitudes that her visit on the avenue afforded him.

He looked at Mrs. Smith's face. She had evidently been weeping. He had undoubtedly interrupted a painful meditation.

Well, he reflected, she ought to thank him for that at any rate. That she was not inclined to express any gratitude either by words or by looks was very apparent. It was clear that she did not consider herself bound to entertain Miss Hartman a guest.

After a few uninteresting remarks, uttered uninterestingly, she rose and announced her intention of retiring to her room.

"I leave you," she said, "provided with a couple of readable books, and am sure that you will find them capital entertainers. Of course you will wait to see Lena and Mr. Hartman. I know it would be a great disappointment to you if you failed to meet them."

She accompanied these with a faint, significant smile that was irritatingly visible to Mr. Henshall. He colored slightly, and bit the end of his mustache to restrain the rather impatient retort that rose to his lips.

Mrs. Smith moved noiselessly about. There was the same feline suggestions about her walk that he had noticed before.

"Good night," she said indifferently.

As she passed him something fell at his feet. He saw it there before him, but made no effort to pick it up for a few seconds. Then he stooped and raised it from the floor. It was an old fashioned gold brooch, one of those trinkets that we have seen our grandmothers and great-aunts wear, and have admired in the days of our childhood.

At the back of the brooch was a portrait, beautifully colored, standing out conspicuously from the dull gold frame.

As he looked at it Henry Henshall was conscious of a mental shock such as he had rarely received. The picture conjured up a whole train of reminiscences that for the last few weeks he had hardly ventured to disturb; for in the startling eyes and uncanny expression of the photographed face he had no difficulty in recognizing the man whom he had seen in the Wagner palace car, and whom he had mentally dubbed the heavy villain of the episode.

In an instant he was on his feet; his hand was upon the bell; his intention was instantly to send a servant to Mrs. Smith, summoning her to his presence.

He was spared the trouble. The door was noiselessly opened and the lady herself entered the room.

"I dropped my brooch," she said apologetically. "No, do not trouble," she added as he made a movement. "I think I know where to find it."

The young man's heart was beating violently. He wanted to tell her that he had picked it up, but was unable to find the words.

He held it up and tried to speak. In an instant she had snatched it from his hand.

He held it up and tried to speak.

"I would not lose it for the world," she said.

Henry Henshall struggled with his emotion for a moment and overcame it.

"You know that man?" he asked harshly.

She looked at him for a moment, then burst into a loud, unmusical laugh.

"If I know that man? Ha! ha! ha! Do I know him? Ah, it is too good! Ha! ha! ha!"

She sat down and laughed hysterically, he looking at her in mute amazement. Suddenly she seemed to secure control of herself. Her laughter ceased. The expression on her face became one of uneasiness. She advanced quietly to Henshall and said, with an indifference which was unconvincing even to the young man:

"Do you know him?"

He answered at once: "I do not know him. I wish I did, for I believe he is a—a"——

He paused in embarrassment.

"Go on," she said.

"I was going to say," he resumed, "that I believe he is a villain."

"You are right," she said deliberately, fixing her blue eyes on Henshall's white face. "He is a villain, and it is his wife that says so."

Henshall recoiled. Intense surprise momentarily bewildered him; then came, like a ray of sunshine, the knowledge that here was a clew to the recovery of his ideal. Not a thought of Lena Hartman entered his mind to thwart his plans.

"You know his wife?" he asked.

Again she laughed mirthlessly. "I am the woman unfortunate enough to bear that relation to him," she said. Then in alarm: "Mr. Henshall, I do not wish to acquaint you with my past life. You have come into possession of a secret through no fault of mine. I beg of you not to betray my confidence."

Her evident sincerity overcame his animosity to the woman.

"Mrs. Smith," he said, "your secret is safe. Tell me, I implore of you, as much about this man as you conscientiously can. To show you how much in earnest I am I will tell you my reasons for asking this."

He then related to her the story of his journey in the Wagner palace car, omitting no detail likely to interest her.

He then told her (and strange to say, he really believed it himself) that his object was to find the girl, although engaged to Miss Hartman. He would be perfectly loyal to Lena, but he felt that he could not go through life without having met his ideal, if only to speak with her briefly, to study her beauty for one hour.

He must see her. He would perhaps forget her if his curiosity were satisfied. Ah! how easy it is to "talk one's self in," as the saying is. What a delightful thing an eased conscience!

Mrs. Smith was a woman of the world, and she understood the complexion of the case far more thoroughly than did young Henshall. But apparently it served her purpose to gratify him.

"Do you know the names of the people with whom you saw him?" she asked.

"Crawford," he answered.

"Did you learn that they stopped at No. 3— West Thirty-eighth street?"

"Yes," in intense surprise, "I called there."

"So did I," she said quietly, "but the bird had flown."

"Have you any idea who the Crawfords were?" It was his turn to question.

"None at all," she replied bitterly. "I need hardly say that Watson is not my husband's name. He has assumed many aliases, but the name to which he was born is Leopardi. He is an Italian by birth. He has called himself Rimaldi, Duval, Schimmerlein, Henshaw and Watson, as far as I can remember. I met him two years ago. I knew him as Dr. Henshaw, the mind reader.

"Hypnotism was a subject in which I was deeply interested. I attended all the lectures on the subject that I could possibly find. I met Dr. Henshaw at his house. I was rich. I had money and jewels.

"How it came about I can never thoroughly understand, but we were married. Two months later he left me penniless. I waited for his return, and waited in vain. A child was born to me. Thank goodness it died. I took this position temporarily. I live for revenge, and," fiercely, "I will have it."

Grave fears for the safety of his ideal surged up forcefully in the bosom of Henry Henshall as he listened to this story. That she was in danger was now very evident. His mind was made up.

"A man and a woman, both in earnest, and working together in unison, ought to be able to accomplish a great deal. I want to find this man for chivalry's sake," he said, again furnishing excuses to himself. "You want to find him as a wronged woman. Shall we join forces?"

She hesitated for one moment. Then her mind was made up.

"Willingly," she said.

"Vy dis is Dr. Henshaw, ain'd it?" exclaimed Herr Steinmetz as he laid his great hand on the shoulder of a man walking rapidly past him on lower Broadway. "Vere haf you pin all dis time? Haf you your old frents forgot?"

The doctor was in anything but an amiable frame of mind when his meditations were suddenly cut short by this inopportune recognition by an old acquaintance. With a deep frown on his brow he lifted his piercing eyes to Steinmetz's face and curtly returned the greeting.

The German pulled him out of the way of the crowd to the edge of the curbstone and plied him with questions. Was he still lecturing? What was he doing in New York? Where had he been buried out of sight for so long?

He replied that he had settled down to practice his profession in New Orleans, and had had no opportunity to meet his former acquaintances. He was spending a few days in the city to transact business of the utmost importance, and he was then on his way to keep an appointment that he could not delay, as it was already getting late.

"So," said Herr Steinmetz, "bud you must gome und see me. My gousin Heinrich Neuberger, your olt manager, is here and he will vant to talk vid you vile you stay in New York. Can't you gome to-nide?"

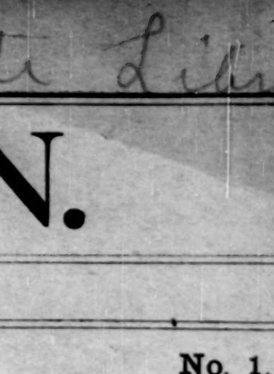
"I think I can," returned the doctor, who was shifting around anxiously, and evidently desired to make the interview as short as possible. He was perfectly willing to promise to see his former manager, but if there was any one man he had particular reason to avoid, that man was Heinrich Neuberger.

"You must gome to my goncert," continued Herr Steinmetz. "Id vill be grant. I haf disgofered a new Camilla Urso, a greader blayer dan Matam Urso ever. She vill make her deput to-nide at Steinway hall. You are a musician; you must hear her."

Putting the proffered complimentary ticket into his pocket the doctor, to end the interview, said "Good-by," and hurried through the first door he noticed, through the Schermerhorn building to Wall street and then down past the subtreasury and the custom house to the Hanover square station of the elevated railroad.

Henry Henshall, who had been down town to see his father, happened to be riding on the same train as the doctor, but he was so deeply engrossed in his thoughts that he did not notice the former husband of his fiancee's companion as he passed through the car looking for a seat.

The young artist was downhearted, and as the train sped up town he wondered what to do with himself to while away the evening.



He lifted his piercing eyes to Steinmetz's face.

He did not care to go to his club, he had no reason to go home and he had told Miss Hartman not to expect him until Saturday. When the guard yelled "Fourteenth street" he suddenly determined to leave the train and take a table d'hote dinner at one of the Italian restaurants in that portion of the city.

After his meal he enjoyed a good cigar, and then started to walk leisurely over toward Union Square, along the north side of Fourteenth street. Before he had taken many steps his artistic eye was attracted by the well rounded figure of a girl just ahead of him, who carried a leather music roll in her hand. There was something familiar in her appearance, and he quickened his pace to get a better look at her.

The next moment he knew that she was the ideal with whom his brain had been filled since he first caught a glimpse of her in the Wagner car.

His first impulse was to lift his hat and address her, but he restrained himself, knowing that she would undoubtedly resent his impertinence.

He resolved to find out where she went, however, and permitted her to get several feet in advance, but not very far, as he feared to lose sight of her in the crowd that was hurrying along the thoroughfare toward the places of amusement.

As the girl reached the corner of Irving place she came suddenly face to face with a man in whom Henshall recognized the younger of the two men who had been traveling with her on the New York Central railroad. She looked down and tried to pass him.

"I am very glad to meet you thus unexpectedly, Miss Crawford," sarcastically remarked the doctor, detaining her with his hand.

"Let me go; I have nothing to say to you," she exclaimed, looking up at him appealingly and shrinking from his grasp.

For a moment Henshall stood irresolute. He saw that the girl wished to escape from the man, who seemed determined not to let her go; but he could not tell what their relations had been or how his interference would be taken.

Again he heard her plead to be let alone, and she turned her eyes toward him as if to appeal for help. He saw that great, dewy tears were stealing out upon her long eyelashes, and he hesitated no longer.

"What do you mean, sir, by insulting an unprotected lady?" he cried, jumping forward and giving the doctor a shove with such violence as to nearly throw him over the iron fence around the Academy of Music. He pulled forward in front of the girl, who immediately left, and he shook his fist in the face of her astonished acquaintance.

"You deserve to be thrashed within an inch of your life," he continued, "and I feel very much inclined to give you a severe chastisement to teach you better manners."

"Come, get away from here. I will not stand any more of this nonsense," returned the physician. "I shall call a policeman if you interfere with me."

"I shall not allow any one to insult a lady in my presence," said the artist, who felt that he had to offer some justification for his conduct to the throng that had already collected around them.

"This is ridiculous! I spoke to an old friend of mine," was the final reply vouchsafed to the girl's champion, who allowed himself to be put aside as the furious doctor moved away.

Henshall followed, thinking that he might again have the opportunity of stepping between his ideal and one from whom she was evidently anxious to escape.

He was crossing Irving place when a carriage drove past. He recognized it immediately as Edward Hartman's. He hoped that the occupants would not notice him, but he was disappointed. He was walking ahead when he heard a familiar voice calling his name. He turned and saw Mr. Hartman beckoning to him. The carriage had stopped in front of the academy and the banker and his daughter were alighting.

"Lena thought she would like to go to the theatre this evening," said Mr. Hartman, after shaking hands with him, "so, as she never saw 'The Old Homestead,' I have brought her here. I have a box, and I want you to come in with us, unless you have some special engagement."

"I want to see a—friend," said Henshall.

"You can go out between the acts and see him. I may want to see a man myself, and I know that Lena will excuse us," said the banker with a facetious wink to the young man.

The artist came to the conclusion that the young lady, in whom he felt a much more lively interest than he did in Lena Hartman, had probably gone too far for him to overtake her, and so he allowed his fiancee to persuade him to enter the academy. "I really have some business on hand, though," he remarked, "and I shall be obliged to leave before the end of the performance."

He had seen Denman Thompson's play before, and he was far too much engrossed in his own thoughts to take any interest in the quiet rustic scene on the stage.

In the meantime Dr. Watson, as the evil eyed one chose to style himself for the time being, had gone along Fourteenth street as quickly as his legs could walk.

When he reached Union square he looked around in the vain hope that he might catch sight of Miss Crawford. She had disappeared, and he did not know which way to turn. People surged around in every direction, and he knew that if the girl had tried to escape she might have taken a horse car, as long as she had reached the corner ahead of him.

"Curse the luck," he muttered; "if it hadn't been for that young idiot's block above I should have had her in safe keeping before now."

He went over to the Morton House cafe, sat down at one of the tables and ordered a glass of absinthe.

"I thought I had time to catch her again before she reached Union square," he mused. "I wonder if she really walked that whole block. She couldn't have taken one of the green cross town cars, as I did not notice any pass there. Let's see, where could she have gone? Not to any of the places on the south side of the street, that's very sure. She might have entered Steinway hall. By jove she must have done it."

This idea impressed him as being very good, and he told the waiter to bring him some more absinthe. As he sipped the liqueur his mind was active.

"Of course that old fool Steinmetz is bringing out a new fiddler, and she would naturally want to attend the concert. Supposing—no, it is not possible—yes, it is, though—she might have sought work there herself. I do not know but that she is the new Camilla Urso herself. I'll find out."

He did not dream of going to the hall himself and seeing his old friends Steinmetz and Neuberger. He left the cafe, and as a first move bought an Evening World from a newsboy and turned immediately to the amusement column, where he saw the announcement that Miss Louise Neville, a talented young artiste, would make her first public appearance in the United States.

"Louise Neville may be Edna Lewis," he thought. "It is not probable that she would appear under her own name or under the alias adopted by her father."

To settle the question to his own satisfaction he walked around to the nearest florist and bought a large bouquet. Then upon a blank card he wrote:

"With the sincere regards of an old St. Louis friend who has often enjoyed in private the accomplishment that the public are now given an opportunity to applaud. EDWIN ST. LEONARD."

He instructed a young man to deliver the flowers to Miss Neville off the stage, and to say that he had been sent by Mr. St. Leonard. Fifteen minutes later the messenger returned.

"When I handed her the flowers," he reported, "she said she was surprised to hear that Mr. St. Leonard was in New York, and she told me to thank him for her."

"I am glad to have that much settled. Now I can lay my hands on Edna," thought Dr. Watson. "Those infernal managers have hold of her; that's the only trouble. I can't very well take her by force, and I'm afraid it is too late to get the old gentleman down here before the concert closes. I'll try, though."

Returning to the Morton house he wrote this letter:

"MY DEAR MR. CRAWFORD: My efforts have at last been crowned with success. I have discovered your daughter. She is now at Steinway hall, and if you will come down here without a moment's delay you may be able to see her to-night. In haste, G. L. WATSON."

He procured a messenger boy, and by aid of a liberal tip secured the promise that the note would be delivered in the shortest possible time at Kowenhaven place, near Sixty-seventh street.

He then stationed himself near the door of Steinway hall to await developments.

Not long after this he saw his whilom assailant pass him and speak to a friend. Henshall had sat through two acts of "The Old Homestead" by the side of Miss Hartman, and, believing that he had done his full duty to her, he pleaded the engagement he had mentioned when he met her and bade her good night. In front of Steinway hall he met a brother artist whom he had known for years.

"Come in here with me," said his friend. "A musician who heard the new violinist play in private yesterday says she is simply a marvel, and that she is bound to create an immense sensation. I bought tickets and intended to come here in time, but was delayed. I hope we have not missed her entirely."

Dr. Watson did not lose sight of Henshall until the swinging doors closed behind him.

For Solicitor—6th District,
OLIVER H. ALLEN.

CLINTON, N. C., OCT. 16, 1890.

THE CAUCASIAN with this issue enters upon its ninth volume.

The evils of the McKinley tariff bill are already being felt. The price of shoes has been advanced 10 to 50 cents per pair by northern manufacturers.

Hon. W. J. Rogers, Democratic nominee for Congress in the 2nd N. C. District, has thrown up his nomination on account of poor health. Another convention will shortly be called to name a standard bearer for the district.

Steve Jacobs, a notorious croatan outlaw, of Robeson county, was hanged last Friday at Lumberton for the murder of Mrs. Earp, committed about two years ago. Jacobs confessed to having committed four murders in his life and attributed all his crimes to whiskey and bad associations.

According to the annual report of the Commissioner of Pensions there are 537,944 pensions on the rolls of the Government now, and more than a half million additional applications are on file in his office, and they are still pouring in. Great Scott! Think of more than a million pensioners.

The Wilmington Star says: Rev. C. L. Arnold, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, has definitely determined upon leaving Wilmington. He will accept the charge of St. Stephens church in Goldsboro. His charge of St. Paul's, in this city, will terminate November 1st very much to the regret of his parishoners and other friends in the community.

The new tariff law has not been in effect a week yet, but the rise of so many of the necessities of life has raised a howl of discontent that has frightened even this hide bound "protection" administration, and unless all indications fail it will be frightened a good deal worse when the returns from the Congressional elections are all in.

The organ manufacturer, Beatty, at Trenton, N. J., has been indicted by the Federal grand jury for using the mails for fraudulent purposes. Beatty is charged with sending circulars throughout the country offering organs at ridiculously low prices and after the receipt of the money, refusing to fill the order till a further sum would be forwarded, claiming that he had run out of cheaper instruments.

The fates and the weather beareau being willing, Goldsboro will have a big fair next week. We know it will be a success, for all the people of Goldsboro and Wayne we saw when there a few days since are interested and lending a helping hand and this kind of action will make a success of anything. 'Mine hoast" Hunter the clever and general proprietor of the Gregory—Arlington Hotels will add much to the Exhibt by tastily displaying his interesting hotel museum. He has just added some interesting war relics to his exhibit. We do not know a clever hotelist. He [illegible] the palate with many [illegible] table delicacies and he [illegible]ts the eye with ancient [illegible]rosities.

The Globe says: Rev. Thos. Dixon, the distinguished North Carolinian who has made such a reputation in New York as a preacher and lecturer, and who is already well known to our people, will lecture in Durham on the 28 instant, on the subject of fools.

Editor Fairbrother should secure a reserved seat for the man that came up and stopped his Globe because he was going to take Dr. Jayne's Almanac for this year, and had rather look at the pictures in the signs of the Zodiac than to have all the papers in North [illegible]na.

MY FRIEND--A WORD WITH YOU.

Do you know that every man who desires to vote at the election must register anew? Even if you have registered and voted before, you must register again under the new Election Law to vote this year.

Do you want the Republicans to carry the election and have your neighbors arrested and put in jail as in 1868-9? If not, register and vote the Democratic ticket.

Do you wish the negro to get control of your county and State? If not, register and vote for the Democratic nominees.

Do you not know that every negro in the State will register and vote? Then s must every white man.

Do you want negro Yankee soldiers with drawn bayonets to meet you at the polls and dictate to you how to vote? If not, be sure your name is on the registration book, and do not fail to vote the straight Democratic ticket.

You can't register after Oct. 24th, so register at once. Don't say you have not time, take time--your happiness depends on it, the good name and prosperity of your State depends on it, honest government and white man's control depends on it. Don't wait. Delay may cause the defeat of the party.

All Democratic papers will please copy and keep at the top of the column of each issue until after the election.

JUSTICE MILLER.

Justice Miller of the United States Supreme Court, who was stricken with paralysis about a week ago, died on last Monday night. He was born in Richmond, Ky., in 1816, and was graduated from the University of Transylvania. After studying and practicing medicine for a few years he turned his attention to the law in which he made rapid progress. Owing to differences with his neighbors on the slavery question he removed from his native State to Iowa in 1850. In 1862 President Lincoln appointed his a Justice of the Supreme court and he had served on the bench ever since taking rank with the foremost jurists as a constitutional expounder. Personally he was popular wherever known. He was of large frame, sturdy constitution, a good liver, democratic in manners and good humored.

The News and Observer in speaking of Senator Ransom as an orator says:

Our own opinion is that he is probably as fine an orator as there is in the United States.

We once listened to a political oration delivered by Mr. Geo. Davis—a Northern man standing by us, exclaimed—who is that man! That speech delivered in New York would be worth fifty thousand dollars to any man. There was probably no man in New York who could equal it. Gen. Ransom could not have made it.

Some years afterwards—in 1874, we heard Gen. Ransom at Metropolitan hall make a speech that Mr. Davis could not have made—and we doubt whether any other person in the United States could have equaled it.

Two years ago this writer heard Senator Ransom make a speech in the court-house, in Clinton, which we believe no man in North Carolina could have improved upon. Many of our readers heard and remember it. Though of a political nature, it was a perfect gem of oratory. Strong men whom we had never known, on any previous occasion of the kind to show the least emotion, were moved to tears, and at its conclusion pushed eagerly forward and warmly grasped the Senator's hand while tears of admiration and gratitude trickled down their cheeks. Senator Ransom is an orator of undoubted great power, notwithstanding the Rockingham Rocket has never heard him accused of being such.

BE PIG OR PUP.

Every man ought to be pig or pup. Trying to be both destroys the capacity to be truly either. If a man in Eastern North Carolina can so far lose his self respect as to be an independent, let him vote the Radical ticket and get down in the dirt if he perfers it. But if a man pretends to be a decent man and a Democrat, let him show it by voting the straight ticket. If he can't do that, let him make haste to go and join the Radical party and be false to himself and his family.—State Chronicle.

THE OPINION OF OUR READERS ON THE VARIOUS TOPICS OF THE DAY.

We offer this column to our readers in which to discuss topics of interest and profit to them.—ED.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Mr. Editor. In a recent issue of "THE CAUCASIAN" (Sept. 11th we believe) there appeared an article under the caption, is it wise, is it just &c., from "tax payer" upon the question of the proposed increase of taxation for public school purposes. The article is a "labored" effort, and is very naturally calculated to do harm to the public school system of the State and to distract public sentiment upon the school question. The fact that the democracy of the State in convention assembled has said we demand a very slight increase of taxation, that we may have longer terms and in fact an altogether more effecient system of public schools seems to be the whole cause of tax payers complaint.

He raises his voice against the betterment of our educational system without making the first point against the public school of the State which are training to day 260,000 of the white girls and boys of North Carolina.

Again Mr. Editor your contributor protests against the proposed increase of this "already onerous taxation" without stating that 12½ cents is all that is levied on the $100, for public school purposes, and without setting forth any reason for making his protest except that "not infrequently is heard the cry of distress and discord in our party ranks" and a whole lot about "taxed yes taxed until the brow of labor sweats in vain."

He insists that "surely our public schools are doing well enough." Now we believe that it is not well enough for the Old North State to lag behind in educating her children and the fact that Va., Tenn., and all the Southern States with perhaps one exception are outstripping us along this line should make all true Carolinians blush with shame. We believe in public education. M.

SAMPSON COUNTY.

A Mass Convention of Democrats Nominate J. A. Beaman for Senator.

(Wilmington Star.)

The Democrats of Sampson county met in mass convention in Atkins' Hall, Clinton, Oct. 6th, 1890, there being present about five hundred straight-out Democrats. L. C. Hubbard, Esq., of Clinton, was made Chairman, and A. J. Johnson of Tayloy's Bridge was made Secretary.

A committee of one from each township was appointed to draft resolutians, and reported the following:

Resolved, 1st. That we adopt the time honored principles of the Democracy from beginning to end.

2. That we endorse the course of Senator Z. B. Vance and instruct the nominee of this convention to vote for him, first, last and all the time.

An Executive Committee of one from each township was selected: Franklin, D.W. Bland; Taylor's Bridge, A. J. Smith Turkey, M. C. Blount; Piney, Grove, F. A. Clifton; Newton Grove, Wm. Daughtry; Westbrooks, Allen Daughtry; Mingo, R. A. Draughon; Dismal, J. R. Maxwell; Halls, J. R. McPhail; Honeycutts, M. Royal; Little Coharie, W. N. Butler; McDaniels, J. W. Wright; North Clinton, Abram Hobbs; South Clinton. G. C. Butler.

The Committee organized by electing J. R. Maxwell chairman.

John A. Beaman was nominated by acclamation for Senator from Sampson county amid the greatest enthusiasm, and being called, came forward and made a ringing speech, accepting the nomination.

On motion the secretary was instructed to furnish the Wilmington Star and Messenger with a copy of the proceedings of the convention, with request to publish the same.

L. C. HUBBARD, Chairman.
A. J. JOHNSON, Secretary.

[A report of the above proceedings was not furnished THE CAUCASIAN, consequently no notice of it was made in last week's issue as the editor of this paper is the regular Democratic nominee for the Senate, he will make no comments here.—ED.]

Malaria

Literally means bad air. Poisonous germs arising from low, marshy land, or from decaying vegetable matter, are breathed into the lungs, taken up by the blood, and unless the vital fluid is purified by the use of a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the unfortunate victim is soon overpowered. Even in the more advanced cases, where the terrible fever prevails, this successful medicine has effected remarkable cures. Those who are exposed to malaria or other poisons should keep the blood pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Scrofula

Is the most ancient and most general of all diseases. Scarcely a family is entirely free from it, while thousands everywhere are its suffering slaves. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had remarkable success in curing every form of scrofula. The most severe and painful running sores, swellings in the neck or goitre, humor in the eyes, causing partial or total blindness, yield to the powerful effects of this medicine. It thoroughly removes every impurity from the blood.

Scrofula

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had 7 running scrofula sores. One physician advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. When we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, a marked improvement was noticed and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy." B. LOCALS.

—Have you registered?

—Registrars, attention! Has every man in your township registered?

—Only nine days more! If you have not registered, go and do it at once.

—Do you wish to vote? Then you must register before the 25th day of October.

—The County Canvass will be resumed on Monday, the 20th instant, at Turkey.

—A new registration is ordered this year. If you wish to vote, register at once.

—"You have not registered!" This is what will be said to you on the 4th day of next November, when you go to vote.

—Read the notice of appointments of the County Democratic Candidates to address the people of the respective townships.

—It is the duty of every good citizen to vote. But you cannot vote this year unless you register again. Do not delay. Do it immediately.

—The foundation of Masonic Hall on Presbyterian street is undergoing needed repairs. A coat of paint will add greatly to the appearance of the building.

—Sheriff J. M. Spell left yesterday with three negro convicts for the penitentiary. The Sheriff will take in the State Fair while in Raleigh. He tells us that the Sampson county jail is now empty.

—It is the duty of every Democrat to see that he is properly registered, and then that his neighbor is registered. It is his further duty to leave no stone unturned in the effort to elect every nominee of the party.

—The Odd-Fellows of Clinton Lodge, No. 124, have just received an elegant new Mason & Hamlin Organ and placed it in their hall. The Order here numbers something over fifty-five members and is in a most prosperous condition.

—Some villain took a valise from Mr. E. L. Parker's buggy last Thursday while Mr. Parker was attending church. The valise contained a lot of clothing and it is probable the thief will dike himself out in some of it, and if he don't look out, will land in the penitentiary.

—Last week was an eventful one in Clinton. Superior Court convened, County Commissioners and Board of Education were in session, Revival in the Methodist church, conducted by Mrs. Carpenter, Convocation of the Episcopal Church in St. Paul's church, Examination of Applicants for Teachers' Certificates and a marriage. Pretty good record for a week

—Democrats must not sleep on their oars if they would win a grand victory next November, and secure a continuation of good government. They must be active in the fight and see that every man registers and goes to the election. As the Shelby Aurora says, the Republican party is like a jointed snake—it flies to pieces sometimes but always manages to get together about November.

—There is too much at stake in North Carolina for any good citizen to scratch a Democratic nominee. We must present an unbroken front to the enemy, and in the nominating conventions settle all our differences. The decision of these conventions must be final. To seek to reverse them, is to invite evils intolerable and to secure an end to the blessings of good government in North Carolina.—State Chronicle.

—The law enacted by the last Legislature requires a new registration. This means that every man, whether he was registered before or not, must go in person to the registrar of his voting precinct and give in his name. Don't put it off. If you intend to vote in the coming election and do not attend to this matter in the meantime, you'll be LEFT on that day. It is a duty you owe to yourself, your party and posterity to go and register.

—Rev. Dr. B. F. Marable moved his family from Mount Olive to Clinton last week, and now resides in the desirable home of Mr. H. B. Chesnutt, on Presbyterian street. Clinton is glad to have such citizens come within its borders and extends to the Doctor and his family a most cordial welcome. Most of Dr. Marable's pastoral work lies in Clinton and his home is now but a few steps from the door of his church.

—It is possible that many voters under-estimate the importance of the approaching election. Remember, if the next Legislature is not [illegible] System will be overthrown, and our country will be demoralized under the bad laws and bad rule of incompetent and unscrupulous men. There should be no division among Democrats. This is a time when the utmost harmony should prevail. Personal dislikes should be laid aside and the square ticket voted from township constable to Supreme Court Justices.

—Court adjourned Tuesday evening. Judge Armfield made many warm friends in Sampson during his stay here, and leaves with as much good will and esteem as any Judge who has been here in many a day. He is not a hustler on the bench, but careful and deliberative, as, to our mind, a Judge of the law should be. We have never admired the plan of rushing important and complicated causes through court in double quick time. Judge Armfield holds court next at Beaufort, in Carteret county.

Griffin—Swindell.

In the Baptist church of Goldsboro last Thursday night we had the pleasure of attending a very pretty marriage. The contracting parties were one of Goldsboro's most popular and progressive young business men, Mr. J. R. Griffin and Miss Mamie E. Swindell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Swindell, attended by Miss Fannie Giddens with Mr. W. D. Creech; Miss Lily Taylor with Mr. Tom Galloway; Miss Bessie Griffin with Mr. John H. Hill, Jr.; Miss Ella Nash with Mr. Colon H. Moore; Miss Laura Peterson with Mr. J. C. Swindell; Miss Lucy Swindell, sister of the bride and first maid, with Mr. Jos. E. Robinson, editor of The Argus, the groom's "best man." The church was tastefully and prettily decorated. Messrs. D. M. Hardy, Wayne Fonvielle, C. B. Miller, F. B. Edmundson, Geo. Bizzell and Chas. W. Grainger, he clever and handsome ushers saw that all were comfortably seated and their kind attentions to "we strangers" made us feel entirely at home. How much the citizens of a place can do to make visitors feel glad that they are there and the town is always the gainer thereby.

The Orphans.

A class of ten children from the Oxford Orphan Asylum, in charge of Miss Katie Marsh, one of the teachers, gave a short entertainment in the Methodist church here last Friday night. A collection was taken up for them, and, we learn, amounted to about twenty-five dollars. Miss Marsh formerly was a resident of Clinton and her excellent qualifications have eminently merited the position she holds in this institution that is doing so much for the fatherless and motherless children of our State. The little boys and girls were all remarkably polite, neat and orderly, and showed that exceeding great care is exercised in bringing them up at the Asylum. Many of these children become excellent teachers; and all being taught some profession, go out from the institution equipped to successfully fight the battle of life. The class left Monday for Warsaw where they gave a concert on the following night.

To the Teachers.

Mr. Editor: I wish to remind teachers and others, having orders for public school money, that it has become absolutely necessary that every order be countersigned by the County Superintendent in his own hand-writing. Public notice is hereby given that I will be in my office in Clinton on Saturday before the first and second Sunday in each month and on the first Monday in each month. Those interested will please make a note of this and save disappointment. I have on hand blanks for all kinds of orders which the committeemen can get by making application. Respectfully,
ISHAM ROYAL, Co. Supt.

Sudden Death.

Col. John E. Parker, of Honeycutt's township, died suddenly at his home last Tuesday evening. He was sitting near his gin-house when he was stricked down, and died a few moments afterwards without speaking. His death is thought to have been caused by heart failure. Col. Parker was one of the most highly esteemed and respected citizens in the county and leaves a large family. He had reached the ripe old age of seventy-one years. The burial took place on yesterday evening at two o'clock, with Masonic honors. Rev. C. P. Jerome preached the funeral.

Re-Union of Company B, First N. C. Batallion, at Magnolia.

MAGNOLIA, N. C., Oct. 10, '90.

Mr. Editor: The re-union of the survivors of Co. B, First North Carolina Batallion, (mentioned in THE CAUCASIAN some weeks ago) will be held at Magnolia on the 6th day of November next. The public are cordially invited; and don't forget to bring a basket well filled with something for dinner.

At and Around Mount Olive.

We were in Mount Olive a few hours last week in the interest of THE TELEGRAM. That small but delightful town contains some as clever gentlemen and fine business men as we have ever had the pleasure of meeting anywhere.

The genial and clever Capt. Hallett, who was a prominent figure in the last meeting of the North Carolina Truckers' Association, and a member of the Executive Committee, says that the organization has done considerable good and that the annual meeting must be held early next spring by all means. By the way the Captain has as fine an eight acre farm of strawberries as we have seen anywhere.

Mount Olive has been a capital cotton market this season. Over 1,500 bales have been bought and the price has averaged up with Goldsboro notwithstanding the fact that the latter has better freight rates.

Every one we met greatly regretted to lose Dr. Marable and his family and congratulated Clinton upon its gain. He is there as well as in Clinton and everywhere else where he is known considered one of the very ablest and greatest preachers in North Carolina.

We saw a rickety old shanty, rotting down in the midst of many evidences of thrift and prosperity. We inquired what it was and was told that it was the guard house. We asked why it was in such bad condition and was told that there was no use for it. Why is this? Because Mount Olive is a dry town. We were told that there had been but two or three culprits in it since whiskey was removed from the town, and that the mayor and police had almost nothing to do. We were struck with the contrast in our town where the guard house has just been doubled in size.

We rode out a quarter of a mile to the plant of the Pioneer Lumber Company. The enterprising and clever President, D. J. Aaron, showed us over the factory. Mr. J. D. Aaron is secretary and treasurer; W. P. Hall and A. Griswold are superintendents. This is a big enterprise for Mt. Olive. They have $20,000 invested and ship 15,000 feet of sawed and dressed lumber a day. There is big money in the lumber business when properly managed and this company though not yet a year old, is so encouraged by its success that the capital stock will soon be increased and additional machinery added.

Personals.

Miss Anna Bizzell left Tuesday to attend the State Fair in Raleigh this week.

Mrs. Morisey, who has been visiting relatives in Winston, has returned home.

Hon. B. F. Grady passed through town last week on his way to address the people of Harnett county.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Johnson and their son, Ferdie, who have been spending the summer North, returned last week.

Capt. Wm. A. Johnson has returned from the Northern markets, where he purchased a large filling in stock of Winter Goods.

Marsden Bellamy, Esq., of Wilmington, and Geo. M. Rose, Esq., of Fayetteville, were in town on legal business, last week.

Miss Tempie Herring, Messrs. B. F. Herring, J. M. Weeks, W. J. Weeks, George Hobbs, L. D. Underwood and Egbert Watson, left for the State Fair yesterday.

Dr. Frank Boyette left Monday to attend a meeting of the North Carolina Dental Association in Raleigh. He will be away about a week and during that time will visit Lynchburg, Va., and Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. G. M. Monk, of this county, who has just been granted law license, left yesterday for Georgia, where he will probably locate and practice law. He is a son of Mr. H. C. Monk, of Newton Grove township. THE CAUCASIAN wishes him success in his new field of labor.

Duplin County Canvass.

The Democratic nominees of Duplin county will address the citizens at the following times and places:

Chinquepin, Friday, October 17th.
Kenansville, Monday, October 6th.
Pin Hook; Thursday, October 23rd.

FRANKLIN.

Married, yesterday, Oct. 15th, Mr. John A. Murphy of Pender, to Miss Florence V. Corbett. Rev. K. McDonald performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Herring from near Clinton and many other relatives and friends were present at the happy nuptials.

I think it can be said without exagerating that Franklin is as good a farming sectson, has as flourishing Sunday schools, as good and as strong Alliance people as there are in the county. PETE.

LITTLE COHARIE.

Harry Matthis, an old colored man in this township, says he has fourteen children and seventy-five grand children.

Died, on the 8th inst., Mr. S. F. Faircloth who has been in bad health for some time, age about 70 years.

Mrs. Duncan Tanner, a daughter of the above deceased also died on the 6th inst.

J. R Harris, his daughter Miss Ida and Luther Mathis, have just returned from a visit to Mr. Branson Harris of Jamestown, N. C. PLUG.

Mr. J. W. Underwood has the best yielding cotton in the county. He carried 1,320 pounds in its seed to Turlington's gin and got 545 pound of lint cotton. It is called the Peterken Cotton. He is offered 75 cents a bushel for the seed. It is a fine staple and sold for 9 1-2 cents, when the market price was 9 3-8 cents.

WESTBROOKS.

Mr. U. N. Westbrook's wife is quite low with dropsy.

NEWTON GROVE.

The children of Mr. Arthul Lee who have been quite sick with typhoid fever are much better.

Father Price preached to a large congregation at Newton Grove on last Sunday. It was a thoughtful and well prepared sermon and contained much timely advice for all people of whatever faith, creed or denomination. One of his expressions was "The man who says he is a christian and loves God, yet hates his neighbor, is a liar." This gives an idea of the forcible kind of sermons he preached.

DISMAL.

Mr Thomas A. Williams, son of Mr. Daniel Williams, of this township, and a most estimable young man, died suddenly at the home of his father, on last Tuesday night.

"Spreading His Wings to Fly into the Camp of the Radicals."

We hear that there are a few of our citizens who went into the primaries and then as delegates to the county convention and took active part in its deliberations, now have violated the implied pledge that is recognized by all honorable and patriotic men, and come out and give aid and countenance to independent candidates to defeat the will of the people whom they would have us to believe, they represent. We have seen enough such Democrats, and have yet to see one who was not spreading his wings to fly into the camp of the Radicals.

23 Years in the Drug Business.

I have been a druggist twenty-three years, and have sold all the patent medicines which are known in this country, and can truthfully say that I have never known a remedy for blood Diseases of more value than S. S. S. (Swift's Specific.) Mr. A., a customer, was troubled with an eruption of the skin on the back of his hands, and had in vain sought relief of the best local medical talent, also of some of the most noted specialists in New York, and as a last resort spent some months in Paris, France, under treatment of the phosicians there, and had secured only ten porary relief. After all this treatment he was finally cured, sound and well, by Swift's Specific.

Another customer, Mr B., had suffered for many years with Blood Poison, and thought he had been cured by mercurial treatment, but the disease returned, accompanied by Rheumatism of a bad type. A dozen small bottles of S. S. S. made a perfect and lasting cure.

...THE RAIL...OADS.

...ays We Need a Commission to Make Them Tote Fair in this State.

The Rev. Sam Jones in his sermon on last Thursday in the Tabernacle at Wilmington paid his respect to lordly Railroads and their unjust rates. He comes from Georgia where they have a commission, so he speaks from practical experience. His words are as follows:

"I am free to say I don't believe the railroads are toting fair with your people; it is one fare for the round trip to Raleigh fair; down here it is four cents; that is not toting fair. A railroad has got no soul to be damned, and no back to be cowhided, it is a hard matter to get even with them, but I will tell you, in the various places in this State best people come to these meetings, and if you want to regulate this thing, you elect men to your Legislature that will have a commission to put the railroad fare down to two cents where it ought to be, then you will be independent. Will tell you, the "vox populi"—as one of our candidates said, "Who is vox populi anyhow? I have got two letters from him." Vox populi is the biggest fellow in this country, no doubt about that, and you can ask one of these officials why he won't give you the same rates. "Oh," he says, "the traffic association controls that." He can fool you with that, but he can't me. That is like this inter-state business; whenever they want to do anything they go along and do it, and whenever they don't they say, "The inter-state prevents." That traffic association, that interstate business is nothing more or less than subterfuge of a people who don't want to do something they ought; and when you go home, talk about this thing; send men to the Legislature who will put the passenger tariff down at two cents a mile, just where it ought to be, and then you can afford to go along like a white man; you ain't begging.

I know railroads just like everybody else in this world need friends, and the way to have friends is to show yourself friendly. Put the fare down to a dog fight, or a base ball game or a fair, and then make the people of the State pay a large per cent. more to attend these meetings. I am for right every time. God knows I have nothing against railroads personally, it is just a question of right that is all. The railroad that runs through my town, when we hold our tabernacle meetings there every year, they have cut their rates down to a three cent rate, less than one cent and a half round trip, and then they contribute 15 per cent. of all the gross sale of tickets to the town, towards the expenses of the tabernacle meetings. But over here you can get a dog fight rate, you can get a base ball rate. That is all wrong; now don't anybody say that I am going outside of my province as a preacher and meddling where I have no business. Bless your soul, that has just about as much to do with the meetings as the ten commandments, for you fellows have to get there. From the collections they have taken up here, they have just about got all your money you had before you got into the house. (Laughter.)

Now you think over these things; at last, my countrymen, as I have said just now, the vox populi of this country is the ruling power; and the bird that can sing and won't sing, ought to be made to sing. I hope you reporters will get that just as I said it. I have been preaching at Durham and Charlotte and different places in this State, and not less than $50,000 will be paid by people coming to these meetings. There won't be less than twenty-five thousand people coming in from first to last, and they wont average less than $2.00. Now you think of that some. They pay $50,000 railroad fare and then tug and twist, and we have about $800 up to this writing to pay for the tabernacle; that is a joke. If you just loved the tabernacle like you love the railroads! But there is this difference: The railroad makes you pay before you get on, and we let you ride along some and trust to your honor. (Laughter.)

TRUNK LINE OF GLORY.

(Rev. Sam Jones.)

Here is a grand old trunk line of glory. The first station that we walk up to is "Conviction." I thought I would die before the train left; I never had such feelings since the Lord made me. I got on the train at "Conviction." The train moved on by and by, and I thought I would die every round of the wheels; the first stop was "Conversion." I said, Glory to God, this is the grandest place I have ever been in. I would be willing just to get off here and stop forever; but the bell rang, and the train moved on, and directly the porter called out, "the next station is "Obedience." And we stopped up there and I said, I never have seen such willing workers since the Lord made me; everybody doing and everybody doing their best; by and by the train moved on again; the porter called out, "the next station is 'Brotherly Love,"' when I got there I said, I never saw people love each other like they do in this grand place; and directly the train moved on, and just before we got into another station, the porter poked his head in the car and said, "the next place is Generosity," and they commenced piling out of the windows and doors; one big old fellow sat by my side and said, "I worked mighty hard for what I've got and I ain't going to give it away." And he jumped out of the window and the bones were ten feet thick along there on the track, and they said they would die before they would give away what they had. When the train pulled out from that town there wasn't but one fellow in the car with me; as soon as you pass that station you just have the whole car to yourself. (Laughter.) The next station we ran up to was "Complete Consecration," and then I heard them singing "Yes oh yes, all I have is the Lord's; oh praise Him forever." My heart, my hands, my feet, my dollars my blood, my all belongs to God and I am going to stick to this train; God helping me I will never get off the train. Some of these days the engine will blow its signal for the pearly gates and when she runs up to the grand central station I will alight, and tell mother and father and loved ones "How do you do?" and say, "We have said 'good bye' forever."

THE TARIFF BILL A LAW.

Biger Profits for the Capitalists, Smaller Revenue for the Government, and Higher prices to be paid by the poor man.

In the last Congress the Democrats presented and passed through the house a tariff bill that lowered the tax on the necessaries of life, but a Radical Senate killed the bill. The Radicals controling both Houses of the Congress that has just adjourned, inspired and aided by Satan himself, have concocted the most unjust and infamous piece of taxation in the McKinley bill ever known in history of this county. This bill the Radicals have passed though both Houses of Congress Harrison has signed it, and it is now a law. The New York Herald speaking of it says:—

The capitalists have worked and lobbied for it because it affords them an opportunity to charge higher rates for their goods and to pocket a large profit. But the laboring man will find that he has to pay a little more here and a little more there for the necessaries of life, and these innumerable "littles" will seriously affect his income. He will discover in time for the next presidential election that the greatest good of the greatest number has been relentlessly sacrificed to the enrichment of a few whose gains are already abundant. * * * This McKinley bill forces every poor man in the country to give more for the garments which protect him and his children from the cold than he would need to do under a lower tariff tariff. That is where the shoe will pinch.

The Great Majority

Of cases of scrofula and other blood diseases are hereditary, and therefore difficult to cure. But we wish to state in the most positive, emphatic manner that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula in every form. The most severe cases, too terrible for description, have yielded to this medicine when all others failed. If you suffer from impure blood in any way, take Hood's Sarsaparilla

A poor country editor and his wife were awakened one night by a noise at their window.

"Just think," said the wife, with a subdued laugh, "of a burglar coming here expecting to find something!"

"Hush," whispered the editor, "let him climb in, then I will give a yell and it may cause him to drop something he has stolen elsewhere." Hope lingers in the direst poverty.—Moberly (Mo.) Republic.
